

2/100 MP BATTALION

Military police school requires soldiers learn a number of skills, from law and order to patrolling on the ground. Students being taught by instructors of the 2/100th MP Battalion moved through a training site.

Good planning, good training

By Command Sgt. Maj. Rocky SHAPLA

2/100th MP Battalion

It all started in Huntsville, Ala., on Oct. 19, 2002, when the key leadership of 2/100 Military Police Battalion was involved in strategic planning for a 95B10 MOSQ 2x2 that would begin at Ft. Dix, N.J. immediately.

The mission would include training non-MOSQ soldiers already mobilized with their units at Ft. Dix.

“It’s time for the MP battalion to answer the nation’s call to duty.”

Maj. Gen. Tindall
Commander, 100th

Maj. Gen. John Tindall Jr., 100th Division (IT) commanding general, told the battalion’s top NCO: “It’s time for the MP battalion to answer the nation’s call to duty. We need your MPs to not only accomplish this challenge but also be prepared to continue with your current IDT mission as well.”

Within 24 hours of this planning session, 16 instructors and key staff were on their way to Ft. Dix.

The Ft. Dix Combat Readiness Division personnel provided logisti-

continued on the next page