

Lt. Col. Boyd, commander of HHC, 100th Division, gave an opening brief on the day's exercises.

Hostages were identified before the assault began.

continued from Page 8

setting for Army soldiers around the globe.

"HHC hadn't been out of the building to perform training for seven years," said Boyd. "I wanted to take this opportunity to give our people the chance to get out and do some soldiering"

The day began with a briefing and familiarity session with Zussman. HHC soldiers then broke up into platoon and squad level elements, and were briefed on the battle plan by Boyd. All participating soldiers then were issued their paintball gear. Classes were given on how to properly clear a room and how to operate in an urban environment. Soldiers received last minute instructions, and then were led into battle. Maj. D.J. Fisher, 100th Div.

please turn to the next page